Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band (June 1st, 1967) Andy Warhol and the Beatles Chart position: 1,2,3,4,5,6 Record companies: Capitol, Verve Duration: 01:17:20 Related Artists The most extraordinary thing about this record is the incredible amount of money the Beatles got for it. It also struck me as being the first pop album to be released in stereophonic sound. It's hard to imagine now, but this is still considered the holy grail of pop albums and plays brilliantly. Harrison has an amazing rhythm guitar, and Lennon's piano playing is excellent. McCartney is responsible for some of the best lyrics and most popular songs on the album: Hey, Jealous Guy; Strawberry Fields, Yellow Submarine; and the absolutely haunting A Day In The Life. I'd been listening to the Beatles for years and had a large collection of their albums. At that point, I'd never seen an original copy of Sgt. Pepper's Lonely Hearts Club Band. I'd thought it was just a bootleg. A friend of mine from college lived in London and he hooked me up with a copy. I still can't believe it cost as much as it did at the time. (The price came down over the years.) But I was a diehard Beatlemaniac. At this point, I was trying to be the most knowledgeable fan I could be. When I picked up this album I knew I had to have it. There was an immediate connection between me and Sgt. Pepper. I felt like a Beatle. I didn't even know there was a TV show. I've found that the more you listen to Sgt. Pepper, the more you realize just how diverse the Beatles were as a group. That was something that hadn't come up for me much in all my years of listening to the Beatles. I always try to go into an album with as little background as possible. I like to immerse myself and become a part of the experience. On Sgt. Pepper, I knew that I was in for an adventure. I was into sound, and I was into the way the Beatles used color. I had a bit of an obsession with color at that time. That was a very good premonition of things to come. 82157476af
